

Navy Chaplain Goes on Hunger Strike Outside White House Over Uniformed Prayer Rules

Thursday, December 22, 2005

Associated Press

WHITE HOUSE — It's almost Christmas, and U.S. Navy chaplain Gordon James Klingenschmitt is on a hunger strike that includes nightly prayers outside the White House.

STORIES

Lieutenant Klingenschmitt, an Evangelical Episcopal priest, says he won't eat until President Bush signs an executive order allowing military chaplains to pray according to their beliefs.

Klingenschmitt, who began his fast on Tuesday, says Navy admirals have told him that he can't pray publicly in Jesus' name unless he's wearing civilian clothes. He's continuing to pray as the Bible says Jesus instructed, but not in uniform.

More than 70 members of Congress and 170,000 petitioners also are calling on President Bush to let chaplains pray according to their faith instead of being limited to generic invocations.

ADVERTISEMENTS

Advertise Here

BACK TO HOME

BACK TO TOP

POLITICS

ADVERTISEMENT

Learn everything you need to know about any country in the world.

FOX NEWS COUNTRY WATCH

You Decide
2004

The complete state-by-state results of the 2004 elections

PRESIDENTS OF THE UNITED STATES
AN INTERACTIVE TIMELINE

FOX News Gear:
Get it now

